Mrs. Fish's Epigrams.

All society and outside of society was on that trip that she stirred up a hornet's nest by saving:

"I ,a rival of Mrs. Astor? How absurd! She is 84 years old."

"The Goelets! Yes, they paid $2, 000 000 for their duke."

features. But Mrs. Goelet has a greater satisfaction than this. She has had a foct. royal revenge. She agitated the country from one end to the other over the marriage of her daughter to the duke of Roxburghe. It was the they are the best that can be found most exclusive affair of its kind in in the city. You don't know it until social history. Studied simplicity was to be the rule. Everybody "worth while" was to be invited but the climbers and the doubtful ones were to be left unbidden. And to this assemblage of the elect the inner circle of

Mrs. Goelst's Information. However the wedding will not increase Mrs. Goelet's reputation as a woman of good taste. Those little printed slips describing her sea-foam gowrs and reciting archly that Miss Goelet received jewels worth $1,000. 000 were all calculated to arouse pub lie interest. What woman would not rush to see the bride on whose head were heaped eight diamond tiarns and enough jeweled collars to clasp the throats of Brigham Young's

One question remains To what extent will Mrs. Astor and Mrs. Goe let carry their enmity against Mrs Fish and Mrs. Oelrichs? Do these two leaders really intend to exile them for life? Or was the bitter snubbing of Tuesday only a form of punishment for Mrs. Fish's caustic attacks and Mrs. Oelrichs' unguarded 'knocks?' Will Mrs. Astor forgive and bid these two women to her annual ball in January? Should Mrs. Fish and Mrs. Oelrichs be left out of this entertainment the result would be "awful to contemplate" as one society matron expressed it. All the Oelrichs and Fish satellites would have to desert or go into social banishment.

Then there is the cotilion of Mrs. Ogden Mills without doubt the smartest and most desirable of the season. She invites a scant 150 and Mrs. Fish and Mrs. Oeirichs always have attended the Mills parties.

Mrx Fish and Mrs. Oelrichs cannot retaliate. What do Mrs. Astor and Mrs. Goelet care if they are "left out" of the Fish dinners? The Astors and Goelets are stars of the first magnitude and 'honor" hosterses with their presence.
